FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE [illegible] 1862.

Senator Stark [illegible] the [illegible] of his case by the Senate [illegible] the Committee report him disloyal and in sympathy with the rebellion up to November [illegible] November last he expressed himself [illegible] peace by [illegible] the South [illegible] Confederacy. Specials from Washington [illegible] present that he could not [illegible] willing to have the loyal States [illegible] South [illegible] Confederacy. [illegible] Mr. Stark is an active member of the [illegible] Vallandigham Democratic party. We hope it may be possible for the Senate to expel him, for it is a disgrace and a burning shame for such a man to retain his seat in the Senate for a single day.—Cincinnati [illegible]

The appointment of Benj. Stark as Senator of the United States, by Governor Whiteaker, we stated at the time, was an insult to the Union men of Oregon. We [illegible] that he would not, and could not represent the [illegible] of our people in the Senate. Our citizens forwarded to Mr. [illegible] evidence to prove the unsoundness of Mr. Stark. He has not attempted to refute the evidence. The Senate can do as they please with the case. Oregon has expressed her conviction [illegible] to Stark—that he is a traitor [illegible] and from her ballot boxes she has sent [illegible] decree, repudiating his presence in the Senate of the United States.

This has [illegible] to the insult of Gov. Whiteaker. The citizens of Oregon have washed their hands of all connection with Benjamin Stark as United States Senator. When he hears the word [illegible] he will seize his hat and escape from the Senate through some side door.

By telegraph from San Francisco to the Sacramento Union of the [illegible], we learn that a passenger on the last steamer from Panama, named Bushnell or Whitney, [illegible] as answering to the description [illegible] dispatch from Pittsburg, Penn[illegible] individual accused of stealing [illegible] however, was considered inadequate evidence, and the man was discharged.

Two members of Cavalry [illegible] have got into the hands of the authorities for fighting over the respective merits of two ministers, Mrs. Scott and [illegible].

FRUITS.—We notice that strawberries and cherries are beginning to make their appearance in the market, but we cannot tell whether they have a better flavor [illegible] not having had an opportunity to test their quality as yet. We [illegible].

RACE.—A great horse race [illegible] was to take place near Sacramento on the 7th inst., between "Kentucky Hunter" and [illegible]. Much excitement is felt among the sporting turf class.

If old Time would exchange his hour glass for a wine glass, we would all have a [illegible] old time.

A slight shock of an earthquake, says the News, was felt at Los Angeles on the 20th ult.

TERRIBLE ENCOUNTER WITH A BEAR.—On Friday last, Mr. Colwell, a well known and highly respected citizen, ascended Mill Creek some twelve miles in search of missing stock. In the course of the [illegible] he [illegible] a cinnamon bear of large size. Mr. C. having his gun along, levelled it and at the first shot brought the bear to the ground. He then reloaded and fired a second shot, when supposing the bear dead he approached for the purpose of examining it. No sooner had he got within reach than the bear rushed upon his hind feet, and grappling Mr. C. threw him to the ground. It was then a hand to hand contest, and the odds were fearfully against the unfortunate man, who had nothing but a common clasp knife to defend himself with. In the course of the struggle he was badly bitten through the left arm and wrist, and the main artery of the arm was seriously lacerated. At this stage of the fight Mr. C. bethought himself of the ruse to turn on his face and pretend to be dead. The bear then mounted on his back and literally stripped his body of every [illegible]. All this time the [illegible] kept up a furious barking, and [illegible] the bear on his flank, began to [illegible] and engaged his assailant. Whilst [illegible] the bear was thus [illegible] Mr. [illegible] to crawl away on his hands and [illegible] finally reached his [illegible] returned to the [illegible] found the bear dead. [illegible] by his faithful dogs, [illegible] which he [illegible] On examination the [illegible] back were found [illegible] time there was [illegible] jaw with [illegible] the bitten parts. Dr. [illegible] relief, and [illegible] administered [illegible] writing the patient [illegible] Mr. C. [illegible] a large, muscular, and in every way a rough customer to encounter.—Mountaineer.

By Last Night's Stage.

LATER FROM THE EAST.

Dates to June 5th.

CHICAGO, June 2d.—Bouligny, ex-Member of Congress from New Orleans, visited the House to-day, and was received with much warmth by the members.

Gov. Stanly having issued an order prohibiting the use of the schools of North Carolina for the benefit of the blacks, the matter was made the subject of inquiry in both Houses to-day. Such schools are in contravention of the laws of the State.

Mrs. Greenhow, Mrs. Morris, and Mrs. Baxley, three political prisoners held here for some months, have been sent South.

STRASBURG, (Va.) June 2d.—General Fremont's advance under Col. Cluseret occupied this place without resistance last night. A midnight reconnoisance three miles beyond Strasburg, came upon a large body of rebels and an ambush of Jackson's rear guard. Our troops retreated with only three wounded.

FRONT ROYAL, June 1st.—A reconnoisance yesterday afternoon discovered a large force of the enemy seven miles from here on the Winchester road. Our troops opened on them and drove them some distance, taking seven prisoners and several horses and mules.

CHICAGO, June 2d.—The Memphis Avalanche of the 24th of May, contains the correspondence between the commander of the Federal fleet and the Mayor of Vicksburg. On the 21st the former sent a final demand for the surrender of the city. In case of refusal, twenty-four hours would be allowed for the removal of the women and children. The Mayor replied, taking the twenty-four hours from eight o'clock on the morning of the 21st.

MARTINSBURG, (Va.) June 4th.—Reliable statements from Strasburg say that Jackson's whole force, with trains and prisoners, passed through that place towards New Market on Monday. Milroy made an attack on Jackson's rear guard at Fisher's Hill, a strong strategic point, a mile and a half South of Strasburg. From the last information attainable the enemy held their ground and continued to retreat during the night. It was reported that Jackson's advance was at New Market on Monday night. The rebel Generals, Smith and Longstreet, with 15,000 men, are said to be in the valley, but their exact position is unknown.

WASHINGTON, June 4th.—An official report from the Secretary of the Treasury states that the public debt on the 25th of May was $491,445,984, at an average rate of interest of four and thirty five hundredths [illegible].

A special to the New York papers says: "In accordance with a resolution of inquiry a copy of the instructions of Governor Stanly was sent to the Senate yesterday. They are in general terms, and provide for duties such as are suggested in the commission as Military Governor. There is nothing in either commission or instructions about enforcing the local laws. The inquiry was made in consequence of the course of Governor Stanly in suppressing schools for the improvement of the blacks."

The Senate yesterday passed a bill appropriating one hundred thousand dollars for raising sunken vessels for the navy. Under this bill the Cumberland and Congress will be raised, and the Merrimac also, it is said.

CHICAGO, June 4th.—From Tennessee we learn that the steady development of the Union feeling in that State is cheering. Governor Neil S. Brown, a prominent rebel and member of the Military Board, addressed a Union meeting at Columbia a few days since, and said the rebellion was played out, Tennessee was lost to the Confederacy, and all the people ought to go for the Union.

WASHINGTON, June 4th.—Specials to the New York papers say: "Congressmen just returned from White House, Virginia, say that before they left, two trains brought in over a thousand wounded from the Chickahominy, who were transferred to vessels, to be distributed among the different hospitals. Those in charge said that many more were to come in. There were, besides, many who were too severely wounded to be moved. They say that Casey's division was led into an ambush—the enemy drawing them on by a feigned retreat—until they were victims of a fire from the woods each side, against which no troops could stand. On Sunday the enemy were driven at all points on the line, [illegible] Casey's division, however, had gained no ground up to Sunday night—the time the fighting ceased. This division was composed of New York regiments."

The bill recognizing Hayti and Liberia passed the House yesterday—86 to 37.

The bill for the punishment of polygamy imposes a penalty of five hundred dollars and imprisonment for not less than five years.

From Burnside's Department we have the following:

Two steamers ascended the Meherrin river on the 18th of May a distance of twelve miles. There they found a deserted battery and earthworks. The river above was obstructed by fallen trees and sunken vessels.

On the 19th, an expedition up the Chowan river destroyed Fort Dillard. This work was reported to be very strong, with rifle pits for 1,000 men. After removing various obstructions in the river, the expedition proceeded up Blackwater river for two miles, where they found three schooners sunk. Several small vessels have been captured.

The route for the Pacific Railroad, as provided for by the bill that has passed the House, runs gradually directly north and west from St. Joseph to the Southwest Pass near the forty third parallel, and thence deflects southwest to Great Salt Lake, from which point it describes a circular course in a northerly direction and enters California above Sacramento.

WASHINGTON, June 4th.—The Secretary of War in transmitting Gov. Stanly's instructions says: "Whatever the Governor may do, will be fully indorsed by the Department, trusting to his judgment and discretion."

NASHVILLE, June 4th.—A train from Columbia brought, this evening, 1,000 [illegible] prisoners of Gen. Prentiss' division, taken at the battle of Pittsburg Landing. They were paroled in consequence of the rebels being unable to feed them. They report there is universal discontent among the rebel soldiers who are anxious to go home. Four hundred more prisoners will arrive to-morrow. The speech of ex-Governor Brown at Columbia is exerting a powerful influence on hundreds who have been led into secession.

BALTIMORE, June 4.—A survey of that portion of the Baltimore and Ohio [illegible] by the rebels [illegible] shows [illegible] little damage was done [illegible]

WASHINGTON, June [illegible].—The [illegible] which the [illegible] bill was [illegible] last week was [illegible] the bill and [illegible] referred to the Select Committee on Confiscation. They will be reported back [illegible] House in a few days.

EASTON, (Pa.) June 5th.—This is a freshet in the Delaware and Lehigh rivers. The water has already reached the second story in the lower part of the town. All the bridges between here and Mauch Chunk have been swept away. The canals have overflowed. The furnaces have been stopped. The railroad has been submerged. Many people were drowned in their houses, so sudden was the rise. A dispatch from the Delaware Water Gap says the freshet is equal to that of [illegible]. The damage to the Delaware and Lackawanna road is great, and will require several days to repair. THE FLOOD.—As remarked in a late number of the Mountaineer, "the flood" has a "standing head" for this item; but this is the only "standing" part of it,—all the rest being either still or running off, or all at. The river is still, the water still continues to run, and we, besides several other street runners, whom are not a few ladies, the ...ing in the streets and sidewalks are all also, an occasional top heavy individual who has been taking a little inwardly to counteract the bad effects of the much outwardly, gets afloat while vainly attempting to walk a single plank erected on a tottering ... but there is no "standing" feature connected with this flood as yet. We hope, however, to see the water come to a stand by to-day. The rise yesterday was comparatively slow, only amounting to about two inches. Good news from the upper Willamette informs us that the river had fallen about six inches, and strong hopes are entertained that we have seen the worst. We had the privilege of a boat ride yesterday over several streets in the lower part of the city, and found many families still occupying their dwellings, though some had been compelled to move their furniture, bedding, [illegible] and washing to the second story.—Yet, all seemed cheerful, consoling themselves, perhaps, with the reflection that the flood is not half so bad as the one which occurred in Noah's time, nor yet so disastrous as it might be.

MORE VOLUNTEERS WANTED.—We notice a poster recently printed and circulated, calling for the organization of a company of Volunteers for the 1st Washington Territory Regiment of Infantry, Col. Steinberger, commanding, for duty in the military district of [illegible]. The regiment is represented as fast filling up, and claims to be the best disciplined and most thoroughly organized regiment on the Pacific coast. Pay from $13 to $21 per month, with plenty of good clothes, excellent "grub," comfortable quarters and medical attendance when needed. Recruits for this company will be immediately sent to Fort Vancouver, and suitably provided for. Engagements will be for "three years or during the war," and every volunteer will be entitled to $100 bounty at close of service, when he gets an honorable discharge.—The commissioned officers of the company have already been appointed by the Colonel, and will receive their commissions as soon as the company is organized. They are, W. V. [illegible], Captain; Peter Fox, 1st Lieutenant, and James Halloran, 2d Lieutenant. We have no doubt they will make energetic and faithful officers, and that the company when raised will become a credit to the regiment.

CIRCUIT COURT.—Wednesday and Thursday met at the usual hour, Judge Page presiding.

State of Oregon vs. Robert Barry, indicted for burglary. Case tried and jury returned a verdict of guilty, and Barry sentenced to [illegible] years imprisonment and hard labor in the penitentiary.

State of Oregon vs. Andrew Hunter, indicted for attempt at arson. Case tried and jury returned verdict of not guilty, and prisoner discharged.

A few civil cases have been disposed of, but none of any public importance.

STEAMBOAT LANDINGS.—The river steamers now make their landings at the bank in the upper part of the city, and the consequence is that business in that section is perhaps now more brisk than it ever was before. There is a fine wharf in that locality which accommodates these steamers by allowing a chance to land and unload therefrom. We doubt not the price of property in the upper part of the city has increased at least fifty per cent.

NO MORE GAS.—The gas-works have at last been forced to suspend operations, as the supply on hand at the commencement of the rise in the river has been exhausted. We are truly sorry for this, as we had become accustomed to its advantages that we find it now a great source of annoyance to fall back to "first principles"—the use of tallow candles and leaden candle-sticks. However, it can't be helped, and Messrs. Leonard & Green deserve much credit for their exertions in keeping the city supplied as long as they have, while so many difficulties occasioned by the high water.

A CORRECTION.—In our local items yesterday morning appeared an erroneous article relative to an alarm of fire on the previous evening. It appears that there was a cause for the alarm, a chimney having caught fire, which blazed up quite rapidly for a few minutes, but was soon extinguished. We also learn that our good friend of the "Franklin House," became somewhat hostile because we stated that a fight had occurred at his house just previous to or at the time of the ringing of the alarm. We can assure him that we gave the item just as it was told to us by a young gentleman who is a member of one of the fire companies, and who said that he was on the spot at the time, and as a matter of course we believed the story to be true. We [illegible] necessary to publish aught that might injure [illegible] this house, as we have every reason to believe that the "Franklin House" is a respectable, [illegible] and well conducted Hotel as [illegible] in the city.

DAVIS'S Columbian No. 3 gave an exhibition of their skill and power in forcing a considerable stream of water out of one the cisterns on First street back again into the river from which it had come. We did not notice any particular rise in the river, though the water in the cistern rapidly disappeared. The trial was very creditable to the company, giving evidence of the fact that this company is capable of performing good service when required.

Fourth of July Meeting.

At an adjourned meeting of the citizens of Portland, held in the Council Room, last evening, for the purpose of making the requisite arrangements for a proper observance in this City of the approaching anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence, Hon. Wm. Farrar took the Chair, and E. J. Northrup was elected Secretary.

On motion, the Chairman appointed the following committee of arrangements:

From the County at Large:—Dr. A. M. Loryea, A. J. Dufur, E. L. Quimby.

First Ward:—A. M. Starr, C. H. Lewis, C. J. Hughes.

Second Ward:—E. G. Randall, Jos. Webber, Jacob Mayer.

Third Ward:—S. J. McCormick, W. S. Ladd, E. J. Northrup.

On motion, the name of W. H. Farrar, Mayor of the City, was added to the committee.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

E. J. NORTHRUP,
Secretary.

The Committee of Arrangements appointed at the meeting last night, are requested to meet at the Council Room at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Locked In

It was on a [illegible] evening in [illegible] tober, 18[illegible] that the [illegible] sailing packet Con[illegible]elation steamed out of the harbor at H[illegible]ly head. Dark clouds were gathering overhead, the short chopping waves slapped the sides of the vessel impatiently, and the thick black smoke shot straight from the funnel to the receding shore, as if anxious to escape from the restless turbulence of the water, and form a sooty canopy over the dry land.

There were but few passengers on board, and a drizzling rain sent them below. One gentleman alone took his stand upon the quarter deck, and, comfortably ensconced in a suit of oil skin, puffed his cigar in defiance of the weather. He was a tall fair haired man, with a bright eye, thin, high-bridged nose, and light wavy moustaches, through which was seen a good humored but sarcastic mouth. He accommodated himself to the motion of the vessel like an experienced traveler, and, with well gloved hands deep in his capacious pockets, looked on the steersman, the funnel, the lights upon the distant pier, and the vibration beneath him and about him, with an easy and comfortable nonchalance of manner that seemed peculiar to him.

Upon an obsequious and curly-headed steward, who kept coming on deck and then diving down into the cabin upon those purposeless errands which would appear to be the continual employment of those functionaries when on duty—passing near the traveler, he said

"Have you come to tell me that I must not smoke?"

"No, sir," said the steward with the usual deprecating smile, "you can smoke if you choose, sir; there's nobody on deck but you."

"Very few passengers to-night," remarked the gentleman.

"Yes, sir, very few, sir," replied the steward, "you're the only cabin passenger aboard."

"Am I?" said the gentleman. "Then I suppose I shall have my choice of berths."

"Whichever you please, sir, when you come below. We've only one other passenger, and she's a lady."

"Ah!" said the gentleman, looking down the sky-light, as if to see if his fellow traveler were in the cabin. "I'm afraid we shall have a rough passage."

"Yes, sir," answered the acquiescent steward, "it does look very dirty to windward, sir," and he dived down again.

The traveler lighted a fresh cigar, tossed away his old one, looked at the white foam in the vessel's wake, and resumed his march.—He was naturally a gregarious, companionable sort of a fellow, fond of society, argument, the shock of opinions and collision of ideas. He had hoped to meet some other well traveled man, with whom he could have smoked and chatted. He felt that he should bore himself alone, and began to think about the lady who was his sole companion in the boat.

"I wish I knew her," thought he. "We could converse some hours away. Twenty years ago I should have considered this quite an adventure. What fools men are in their salad-days! I should have thought that it was fate that had thrown us together, because we were destined for each other. Perhaps she is married, or old, or disagreeable. I shall be horribly bored till we reach Kingstown."

After half an hour's more walking, he looked down the sky-light once again, and saw a lady seated in the cabin taking her tea.

"She doesn't suffer, at all events," he thought to himself, "I may as well have a look at her." And he finished his cigar and descended the brass-bound steps leading to the "cuddy."

The lady about whom he felt so interested was over thirty years of age, and despite pallid complexion, languid, mournful eyes, possessed great beauty. Her manners were elegant and refined, and a tinge of exhaustion in her face and voice heightened the sense of subdued sentiment that hung around her.—Overwrought sensibility and sensitive nervous organization were written in the constant play of her short, thin upper lip, and the perfect taste of her dress completed the charm of a very fascinating invalid.

When the gentleman entered the cabin she was seated at the table, waited on by a bustling and active stewardess. He took off his cap, as it were, at her, and disembarrassed himself of his oil skin covering. He coughed in token of his presence, but she took no notice, but continued playing with her tea spoon, all unconscious of his entrance.

With a glance at the mirror that betrayed a knowledge of the possession of a good appearance, and the smoothing of a well tied cravat, the gentleman advanced towards the table, and coughed again. The vessel gave a slight lurch, and the tea service clattered at the same time. The lady looked up, saw the new-comer, and bowed slightly.

"I fear we are going to have a rough passage," began the male traveler, when the lady shrieked, and would have fallen, had not the stewardess ran forward to support her.—The gentleman turned pale and red, and pale again, and trembled in every limb.

"Bring some water," he said, after a moment's pause. "Don't be alarmed, it's the—the surprise—the sudden—[illegible] me."

He wetted his handkerchief, and laid it on her forehead, while the stewardess ran for her smelling-bottle. By the aid of their united exertions, in about five minutes the lady recovered, and looked about her as if just roused from an unpleasant dream.

"You had better leave us," said the gentleman.

"Do—do you know the lady, sir?" asked the stewardess, hardly knowing what to do.

"Know her? Yes."

"You've only got to call, mum. I shall be close to," said the stewardess. "Can I do anything more, mum?"

"No—no, thank you," said the lady. "I am quite well now. You—you need not trouble yourself further."

The stewardess quitted the cabin, leaving the two passengers staring at each other in mute wonder.

"Good God, Marie, is it you?" said the gentleman.

"It seems almost impossible it can be you," answered the lady, in [illegible] faltering tones.

"Are you better now?" inquired the gentleman. "Can I get anything for you?"

"Nothing, thank you. [illegible] it be really you?"

"It seems like a dream," continued the gentleman, "to think that after ten years, we should meet on board this boat. It is the most unexpected incident."

"Accident," repeated the lady, with an inquiring look.
